Comments to the Author

general comments

in general this article is very interesting to read, research on local wisdom in education at this time already exists but the specifics in developing nationalism and multicultural insights are still very limited. the authors describe the theme coherently starting from the introduction, the method of results to the conclusion.

Abstract

The abstract is written briefly but clearly describes the contents of the article, the results and discussion are clearly summarized in the abstract. in general it is good, but if possible it will be strengthened is to add data analysis using any model or framework of analysis (but this is not mandatory, just strengthen it).

preliminary

the description of theoretical gaps and gaps in the field (empirical) is clear. writing and quotation clearly provides a scientific discussion as to why this research must be conducted.

Method

explanation of the method is in accordance with scientific rules. the method in detail is explained from the stage of how the data collection is done. it's just that the analytical data section might also need to be described in this section.

Results and discussion

Research findings ranging from factual models to developed models clearly illustrate how this research was conducted. theoretical communication has been built on the basis and assumptions of a strong theory of nationalism.

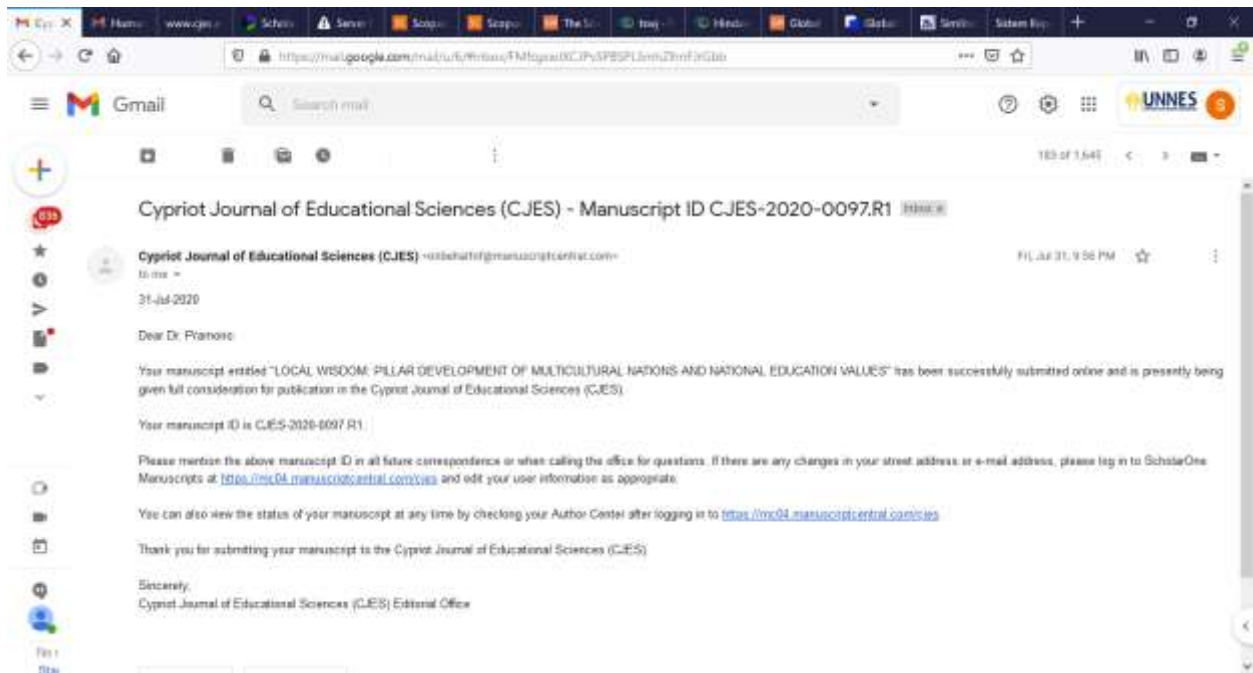

the author has been able to explain how this research can be implemented in the field, where the author has written the link with K13.

Conclusion

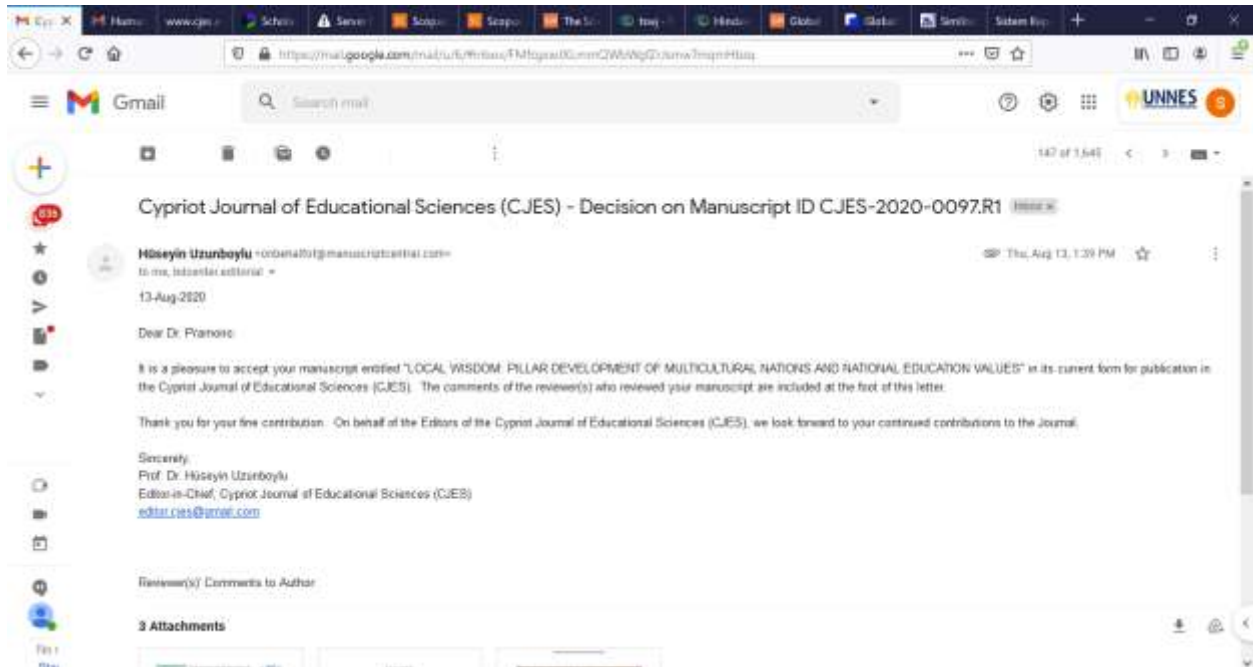

the conclusions reflect the research objectives, are structured properly and answer the main research questions.

if it is a matter or deemed necessary it may be necessary to explain the limitations of the research.
