Heny Setyawati, Tandiyo Rahayu, Nur Haziyanti binti Mohamad Khalid

Dear authors,

Both reviewers suggest accepting your article in print. However, one reviewer has comments. Please take the reviewer's comments into account as much as possible and correct the article. Please, upload the revised article to the "Revisions" section.

Reviewer's remarks: The research material presented in the article is based on the principles of scientific comparative analysis. There are many sources of foreign scientific literature, some of which are not fully related to the researched problem. This overloads the text of the article and makes it difficult to read. Although this is not a major shortcoming of the article.

We have reached a decision regarding your submission to Pedagogika, "An An Empirical Examination of Elite Athletes' Stress Factors during joining in the Training Center Program".

Our decision is: Revisions Required

Dear Ieva Pažusienė,
Executive Editor, Pedagogika

I am writing to you in response to your last email regarding some notes on the article draft prior to publication at Pedagogika. Herein, some information that I may address you regarding the final correct version of the article, as follows:

1. All authors' names, affiliations, and addresses have been correctly written.
2. Article annotation up to 500 characters and its summary up to 1.500 characters with intervals has been adjusted.
3. All figures written in parts of this article have been corrected due to the APA 7 style.
4. DOI links can be traced to their original article source.

This final version has also been edited and obtained some revisions in terms of sentence patterns, simplifying the sentences, and diction from the native English specialist. I do hope this article has matched Pedagogika's writing guidelines for publication.

Best regards,
Heny Setyawati

Dear Authors,

thank you, we received your article.

Article annotation (not abstract) still more than 500 characters.

Abstract. The impacts of athletes' performance potentially derive their stress contributions in the rigidly upmost training center program. This study aims at examining athletes' performance during joining in the sport training center program at Indonesian National Sports Committee, Jawa Tengah, Indonesia. This study involved 290 Indonesian elite athletes from multiple sports fields to be the respondents. Data collection used self-rated questionnaire with a 5-Likert scale, whilst the descriptive statistics, Pearson correlations, and factor analysis were engaged in data analysis. The results revealed athletes' stress factors in daily massive activity, interpersonal relationships, sense of self-loathing, and traumatic experience significantly contributed to their confidence and performance during joining in the training program, including Pearson correlations among these factors ($r = .345$, $n = 290$, $p < .000$) and factor analysis that claimed 44.715% for component 1 and 22.398% for component 2. This study addresses athletes' multiple experiences in the competitive situations of self-esteem challenges, positiveness, and constructiveness of reaching the peak performance.

Please shorten it.

Dear Aldona Bagdoniene,

I am writing to you in response to Pedagogika's email dated 20 July 2021 regarding the previewing the layout of the newest number of journal "Pedagogika" 142(2). Herein, some corrections are needed to do, as follows:

1. The display of Figure 1 and Figure 3 are still too small (page 246 and 248). I think it needs to be larger in size.
2. The distance between Table 2 and Figure 2 (page 247) still spans space.
3. The distance between Table 4 and Figure 4 (page 249-250) can be merged into one page (page 249). Meanwhile, the words "Score Gained" are half out.

I really appreciate you considering revising for some corrections.

Regards,
Heny Setyawati
