Abstract
This study aims to examine the effect of legal audits, internal control systems, IT use and internal auditors' role as determinants of state property reporting quality, and the mediating role of management optimization. This research focuses on a specific case in Tegal Regional Government, reflecting state property management's success in improving regional financial reporting quality. The respondents were 76 employees, including users, managers, and keepers of state property. Multiple regression was used to test the relationship between variables. The results show that the internal control systems and IT use positively affect the management optimization of state property; second, the internal control system, IT use, and management optimization positively impact on the quality of
